The Hawaiian ship Hawaiian Isles just in from Newcastle, N. S. W had a narrow escape from destruction on the voyage. On December 28th, when in lat. 22 01 north, lon. 167 28 west and 53 days out, smoke was seen coming from batch No. 2 and was seen coming from hatch No. 3 and on turning the lumps of coal over at the surface found them hot; then used an iron rod for a tester which heated in a few minutes so as to burn the hand but the coal was not on fire. All the other hatches were then tested and found the heat only in batch No. 3 where eight hundred tons of fine coal were; next day it was decided to pum; water on the coals and steam was got up for the pur pose. The water had the effect of immediately lowering the temperature, on the following day the steam pump was again worked for four hours, the water being led over the coals in trenches dug for the purpo-e: from this time no pumping was found necessary as the coal quickly
